The Emond name has been synonymous with legal learning for 45 years, and our publications form the foundation of law school, paralegal, and law clerk curriculums across Canada. Our customers have told us that our texts have served them well beyond their academic careers and have been important resources to them in their law practice. Of course, not all of our titles fall into this category, and that is why this catalogue is unique. I have hand-selected every title to ensure that only the resources well suited to practising professionals are included.

Several years ago, Emond began publishing practical, accessible, and affordable legal guides designed specifically for the busy practitioner. A selection of titles from our Criminal Law Series and Immigration Law Series are included in this catalogue, as well as resources for personal injury, administrative law, and mediation. Please stay tuned for new practice publications from us in the months to come.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "M. Emond". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a long horizontal stroke extending to the right.

INDIGENOUS LAW AND CANADIAN CRIMINAL JUSTICE

David Milward
Jonathan Rudin

In Indigenous Law and Canadian Criminal Justice, Jonathan Rudin and David Milward provide a broad, accessible overview of Indigenous legal traditions and justice issues, alongside an assessment of the various aspects of Canada's criminal justice system and its often-troubling relationship with Indigenous Peoples.

In the context of ongoing calls for truth and reconciliation and the public reckoning that is finally underway over the true costs of colonialization, these chapters consider both the mainstream Canadian justice system—its laws, policies, and practices, and their effects on Indigenous communities over the years—and the ways in which Indigenous approaches to justice can better serve their communities and improve outcomes, while reducing the crisis of Indigenous over-incarceration. The book also focuses on legal concepts, case law, and Canada's constitution, placing matters of justice in the broader context of Indigenous rights.

General Editors
Brian H Greenspan
Justice Vincenzo Rondinelli

Justice Cameron Gunn
Mona Duckett
Patrick McGuinty

A critical component of virtually every criminal trial, witness testimony has the power to make or break your theory of the case. Incorporating insights from Crown, defence, and judicial perspectives, Witness Preparation, Presentation, and Assessment offers readers practical guidance on handling the myriad of legal issues that may arise in the preparation, presentation, or assessment of witnesses.

This legal playbook is organized into three parts: preparation, presentation, and assessment. Part I covers the vital legal and ethical considerations of preparing various types of witnesses for trial. Part II provides readers with a roadmap to procedural issues that can arise during trial, including refreshing a witness's memory, putting prior statements to a witness, cross-examining an expert witness, and more. Part III discusses factors related to credibility and offers practical guidance on drafting submissions, as well as reasons for judgment, from a judicial perspective.

Whether a novice to the courtroom or a seasoned practitioner, this practical resource's succinct and concrete guidance makes it a must-have for all criminal lawyers and judges confronting the complex realities of witness testimony.

"Happily, for counsel and for the judiciary, there is now a text that looks comprehensively and thoughtfully at the effective preparation of witnesses and the presentation of their testimony in the courtroom, as well as at the factors that can properly inform the assessment of their credibility. Witness Preparation, Presentation, and Assessment is a unique text that melds aspects of advocacy, ethics, courtroom procedure, and evidence."

DETENTION, ARREST, AND THE RIGHT TO COUNSEL

General Editors

Brian H Greenspan

Justice Vincenzo Rondinelli

Davin Michael Garg

Anil Kapoor

In Detention, Arrest, and the Right to Counsel, Justice Davin Michael Garg (Ontario Court of Justice) and defence counsel Anil Kapoor provide a practical examination of early “street level” interactions between law enforcement and members of the public through the lens of sections 9 and 10 in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

National in scope, this resource focuses on three major areas: detention, arrest and the right to counsel. The first major area covers the power to detain a person, addressing law enforcement’s statutory and common law powers, including investigative detention and traffic stops. This area also addresses the issue of racial profiling. The second area covers the power to arrest, including the mechanism of an arrest, reasonable grounds, arrest with and without warrant, and more. Unlike other texts in this area, this handbook includes a third area with comprehensive coverage of the right to counsel, discussing law enforcement’s informational and implementational obligations under sections 10(a) and 10(b).

If done improperly, initial interactions between the state and civilians can lead to Charter breaches and, eventually, Charter remedies, including the exclusion of evidence. With the aim of supporting a balance between the societal interest in effective policing and the rights of the individual, the authors of Detention, Arrest, and the Right to Counsel offer the most up-to-date and balanced resource for criminal litigators, judges, justices of the peace, and law enforcement involved in the administration of criminal justice.

LGBTQ2+ LAW: PRACTICE ISSUES AND ANALYSIS

Joanna Radbord

Issues related to sexual orientation and gender identity impact almost all areas of legal practice. Members of the LGBTQ2+ community face unique hurdles, especially in areas of family, immigration, estates, and criminal law. LGBTQ2+ Law: Practice Issues and Analysis is the first text of its kind, offering a practical treatment of these specific challenges within a variety of legal contexts.

Beginning with a foreword by Kathleen Wynne, the first openly LGBTQ2+ premier in Canada, this text draws on the expertise and experience of a diverse author team to provide practitioners with a deep understanding of how their clients' identities affect their interactions with the Canadian legal landscape.

The chapters are authored by highly regarded practitioners, academics, and activists: Joanna Radbord, Karen Busby, Jeremy Dias, Andy Inkster, Sam Singer, Susan Ursel, Emily Elder, Kelly Jordan, Emma White, John-Paul Boyd, Janet Walker, Ian Hull, Suzana Popovic-Montag, Sayuri Kagami, Adrienne Smith, Michael Battista, Sydney Bunting, Christina Doris, Erica Tait, Andrew Vankoughnett, Ryan Peck, Angela Chaisson, Khalid Janmohamed, Marcus McCann, and Richard Elliott.

"Joanna's commitment to an intersectional analysis and to focussing on the real-world impact of law on people's lives helps make this book an exceptional resource. ... The text belongs on the bookshelf of every lawyer who seeks to provide culturally-competent service, with the leading practitioners in LGBTQ2+ law sharing substantive and practical guidance."

LITIGATING ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE

Jesse Beatson
Gerald Chan
Jill R Presser

Litigating Artificial Intelligence is the first resource of its kind in Canada to comprehensively review the diverse ways AI can interact with the litigation process, both in the courtroom and in legal practice. Presenting a realistic, even-handed treatment of the latest developments in AI and law, the General Editor team and expert contributors address four primary ways litigators can expect AI to influence their work: 1) challenging AI-informed decision-making, 2) navigating evidence law questions arising from AI, 3) bringing or defending lawsuits involving AI-based products, and 4) using AI tools to enhance aspects of legal practice.

Litigating Artificial Intelligence is an ideal resource for all litigators (civil, criminal, corporate, commercial, immigration, and administrative) and essential reading for law enforcement professionals, academics, judges, journalists, policy-makers, law students, forensic scientists, and computer engineers.

"This book has assembled a number of legal experts who have created an eclectic mix of the academic, the practical, the philosophical, and the possible that cover four areas where litigators will encounter AI ... This is a book that can be read cover to cover for a useful overview of the sector or dipped into as needed for specific concerns."
