CATALOGUE

2023-2024

The Emond name has been synonymous with legal learning for 45 years, and our publications form the foundation of law school, paralegal, and law clerk curriculums across Canada. Our customers have told us that our texts have served them well beyond their academic careers and have been important resources to them in their law practice. Of course, not all of our titles fall into this category, and that is why this catalogue is unique. I have hand-selected every title to ensure that only the resources well suited to practising professionals are included.

Several years ago, Emond began publishing practical, accessible, and affordable legal guides designed specifically for the busy practitioner. A selection of titles from our Criminal Law Series and Employment Law Series are included in this catalogue, as well as resources for immigration and refugee law, personal injury, accident benefits, administrative law, mediation, and debtor–creditor law. Please stay tuned for new practice publications from us in the months to come.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, which appears to read "Paul Emond". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Paul" being more prominent than the last name "Emond".

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW: PRINCIPLES AND ADVOCACY, 4TH EDITION

Liz Nastasi
Deborah Pressman
John Swaigen

Administrative Law: Principles and Advocacy, 4th Edition teaches readers the fundamental principles of administrative law. Through simple language and practical examples, readers will understand key legal issues and learn how to successfully argue cases before administrative tribunals.

The fourth edition is divided into three parts: Principles and Theory, Advocacy, and Challenging Administrative Decision-Making and Enforcing Orders. Part I introduces readers to fundamental administrative law principles, such as the right to be heard and the duty to give reasons, with an emphasis on procedural fairness. Part II examines effective advocacy and outlines procedures at every stage of the hearing process, including presenting evidence at a hearing and conduct outside of the hearing. Part III addresses issues that may arise after proceedings and steps that must then be taken.

Authors Liz Nastasi and Deborah Pressman have provided important legislative and pedagogical updates to the fourth edition. These cover major developments such as the rise of active adjudication, new dispute resolution processes that encourage mediation, and online processes.

"Debtor-Creditor Law ... would be an invaluable resource should a new associate practise in either debtor-creditor law or in Small Claims Court. The material is very practical and the language used throughout is clear and relatable. I particularly appreciated the texts' use of a cost-benefit approach to litigation with a focus upon not just why a party may sue, but more importantly, how they can collect on a judgment. I can see why this resource has proven useful to clerks and paralegals as well as young associates."

Litigating Artificial Intelligence is the first resource of its kind in Canada to comprehensively review the diverse ways AI can interact with the litigation process, both in the courtroom and in legal practice. Litigating Artificial Intelligence is an ideal resource for all litigators (civil, criminal, corporate, commercial, immigration, and administrative) and essential reading for law enforcement professionals, academics, judges, journalists, policy-makers, law students, forensic scientists, and computer engineers.

As digital evidence becomes a routine component in every criminal case, all practitioners must keep pace with the constant changes to the law and practice of digital evidence in Canada. By addressing both current and emerging challenges in the field, Digital Evidence, 2nd Edition provides a clear, comprehensive, and up-to-date examination of digital evidence in the context of criminal law. In the current age, crime—specifically fraud—is becoming more common, organized, and complex. The increase in white-collar offences has changed the way society is tackling fraud, from police services across Canada developing specialized units for fraud investigation to regulatory bodies pursuing severe disciplinary measures.
